

List of courses addressing Professional Ethics:

Course Code	Course Title	Brief Justification
ECO 22107DCE	Economics of Education and Health	This course deals with two important components of human resource development viz education and health. The course is intended to acquaint students with an understanding of linkages between human capital and economic development.
ECO 22208DCE	Labour Economics	Labour economics is the study of how labour markets work. This course intends to focus on investigating numerous aspects of the labour market, including the supply of and demand for labour, labour-market equilibrium, human capital, employment and unemployment. It also deals with state – labour relations within the framework of labour unions and industrial relations.
ECO22305DCE	Economics of Conflict, Peace and Development	To date, the study of conflicts has been dominated by political scientists, which prejudices the phenomenon as purely political. However, the use of economic theory and statistical evidence alongside the traditional case-studies can offer valuable analytical insights on the causes of inter- and intrastate conflicts and its effect on economic development. Students are introduced to models of conflict also.
ECO 22403CR	Environmental Economics	This course is designed to provide a comprehensive understanding of issues involving the environment. It presents different economic perspective of environmental systems and their problems with special attention to the use, misuse, and overuse of environmental resources. Issues of sustainability, valuation of environmental services, theory of environmental regulation and global issues related to environment are dealt with.
ECO22405DCE	Research Methodology	This course attempts to introduce students to the foundations of social science research in general and economics in particular. It attempts to make students understand various statistical tools required for compilation, tabulation and presentation of primary as well as secondary data. It also discusses the various steps for preparing a research/project report.